1 Project Status

As of phase 3 the project is mostly on schedule. The points for phase 3 were mostly related to event creation and scheduling. In Hindsight it might have been more efficient to mix and match the points for the phases so to be able to more easily divide the tasks between each team member. As this is a learning experience this is something that can be taken and applied in later assignments.

2 Progress

The tasks this phase were, as previously stated, mostly related to the same end point. Therefore, when dividing the assignments it was possible to have some of the team members focus on other points to make later phases a bit more accessible and offering help to other members when needed. All in all progression looks to be on schedule.

As with every project there are a few kinks that need to be knocked out during later phases as during coding and progression there are things you find that wasn't visible during the planning phase.

3 Exceptions

The structure of the phases is a bit mixed, as in currently for phase 3 the points that were being worked on are points that might have been better suited to be in phase 4 and vice versa. As points related to groups and users is quite necessary for fully functional events. Currently there are a few notes hard-coded to showcase functionality that will then be fully implemented during other phases in tandem with other points.

4 Final Thoughts

The team has been diligent in meeting up, working together and discussing the project. Members are active and willing on dividing up assignments and assisting each other where need be.
